LETTER TO A BOY IN COLLEGE

Bankrupt Policy

We have come to a time of total bankruptcy of policy in the United States. We have lost our allies. We are isolated and alone in the world. This is mainly our own fault. I would not give a dime for the whole tribe of civilian politicians in the United States today. I have known a great many of them, at city, county, state, and federal levels. I do not even associate with them any more. Why pick the company of such a rabble? It would do no good to elect so-called conservatives to office, either. They are all riding the "right-left merry-go-round." You are really nowhere until you escape the whole "right-left orbit" of thinking.

We really have only one sound leadership element left in the United States today: our military officers. The military officer may have been no different from anyone else during his childhood. He probably grew up in the same sort of home as the rest of us, got about the same preliminary education, and so on. Nevertheless, his training in a service academy, and his experience in war, have brought him to an understanding of the realities which confront us today, an understanding almost wholly missing from the civilian sector. The civilian sector lives in an Alice's Wonderland in which the U.N. Assembly becomes a parliament of the world, and everybody submits tamely to the substitution of intellectual force for physical force in international relations. The civilian sector talks of "disarmament" at a time when we are in the greatest physical danger in all our history. The civilian sector has allowed our military technology to stagnate until we are dangerously behind Russia in the arms race. The basic fault of the civilian sector in America is that it has based its policy upon the theory of the victory of intellectual force over physical, military force in the government of the world. In the U.S.A., all of the professional liberals represent the rule of intellectual force as pure idealism, while rule by military force is deplored as "reactionary" and obsolete. This is THE central article of faith among the liberals. You will see this idea expressed in any issue of the Saturday Review, or The Nation, or The New Republic. Now and then a maverick liberal strikes a sour note. Malcombe Muggeridge has suggested in several magazine articles that the modern liberal is really the greatest monster of all history, and that he will cause greater disasters and more suffering than Genghis Khan, Tamerlane, Hitler, Stalin, and all of the other great, talented sadists combined.

Dominating the World

The idea of dominating the world by intellectual force is NOT the ultimate idealism, as you will be led to believe. It is the ultimate nihilism. It is the greatest single piece of rascality ever attempted in all history. Marxism is merely one tool of the attempt to dominate the world by sheer intellectual power. The conspiracy has many other weapons at its disposal, including false and prostituted religion, the techniques of information-control, and the so-called behavorial sciences. It yearns to make opposition to itself impossible by control of the collective mind of man. Men who yearn for such a thing deserve the whip, the branding iron, and the gallows. Yet they parade themselves everywhere today as "idealists."

I would not give a dime for the whole civilian sector of the U.S.A. today, including both the right and the left. What we really need is a military aristocracy. We are a long way from having any such thing. We have the finest military officers in the world, but, because of our long-standing tradition of civilian control of the military, we do not have a military aristocracy ready to spring into political action. This may well be a great disaster for the country, for we desperately need the political talents of military officers today. Indonesia was saved from communism, not by the civilian sector, but by the military. Greece was saved from a communist take-over last year by a military coup. In my opinion, the situation of the United States has reached a great enough stage of desperation to justify a military takeover. But no such thing will occur. For one thing, it would not be accepted by public opinion. The establishment which rules us in corruption and degeneracy thought of that possibility long ago. They have kept up a constant drum-fire and anti-military propaganda for many years. Norman Mailer's novel "The Naked and the Dead," is a prime example. Mailer depicts the military officer in his novel as a fascist power-grabber, intent upon grinding the faces of the people. Nowhere in the book is there any depiction of the armed forces as the shield of the republic, the protectors of the nation's dignity and security. Mailer is, in my opinion, a sorry kind of writer, but he knows how to read the signals from "on high," and he has been hailed and promoted by the mass media as the greatest literary genius since William Shakespeare.

Wrong Ideas

Today we are ideologically bankrupt. We do not merely hold "wrong" ideas. We have proven ourselves incompetent to deal with ideas. Our literary, academic and intellectual leadership have failed us, indeed betrayed us. The only hope lies in the military sector, and we appear little inclined to give the military a chance to protect and save us. Decisions of the future will be military decisions in any case, since the effort to dominate the world by sheer intellectual power has failed, is failing, and will continue to fail. Actually, it failed fifty years ago. Yet it apears that this failure may have to be demonstrated by a great world-wide disaster before it will be accepted by the generality of mankind. If such a disaster is necessary to convince a biped called man of the folly of his blind, ignorant pride, then such a disaster will indeed occur. The rabble of political party hacks who rule us as front men for the largely Jewish establishment did not cause our present troubles; they are not smart enough to have made this much trouble for us; but neither can they extricate us from our troubles. Our political party system rests upon a broad base of cheap crooks at the state and municipal level, whose little minds stretch only far enough to cover crooked paving contracts or good payoffs from the vice racket; upon this broad base of corruption, the "national" elements of the political parties rest. In terms of national and international issues, elected party politicians are governed by an establishment which is not elected, indeed not even known to the wider public. These people who rule over us have given an adequate demonstration of their incompetence. They have failed to provide for the safety of the nation. They cannot maintain our position in international relationships; they can think only of the Jewish vote in the pivotal state of New York. They cannot even maintain domestic order, and have awarded our erstwhile faith in them with riots and with a crime situation which itself is on the verge of turning into an open riot. I am no longer interested in even hearing whether a political party hack is on the "left" or the "right." If he is on the "left" he is one kind of gasbag; if he is on the "right" he is another kind of gasbag. In either case, he is only a front man for the Jewish establishment which really rules over us. I see no hope in the political parties, and I advise you, Jack, not to waste your valuable time on them. I also advise you not to waste your valuable time listening to "peace" speeches on the campus. These "peace quacks" are really advance men for World War III. You ask me how we can save the contemporary civilization? In my own mind, I wrote off the contemporary civilization twenty years ago. Nevertheless, Jack, there will be a day of battle in which the future of mankind, perhaps even the question of the future existence or non-existence of mankind, will be decided. When that battle comes, those whose sense of reality is unimpaired by the follies and lies of these times will know which side is the right side. You asked me what "movement" or "organization" you should join? I suggest that you restrain your youthful enthusiasm until the right movement comes along. If you cultivate your mind properly and develop real nobility of soul, you will know the right thing to do!

JEWISH AGITATION OF THE BLACK REVOLUTION

By A. CHRISTIAN

Jewish agitation of the present black revolutionary uprising was never more startlingly revealed than at the Yale University, New Haven, Conn., on Saturday, April 27, 1968, when a seizure of power from the white legal leaders of America was staged by the black militants of New Haven through the connivance of the Jewish dean of the Law School, Dean Louis H. Pollak.

In the midst of a panel discussion on the urban crisis, participated in by several law school deans, black militant leaders appeared and staged a coup, moved down the aisle onto the platform, wrested the microphone out of the hands of the moderator, took over some of the chairs of the panel members, and urged those present to quit their own meeting which the blacks castigated as futile and useless, and urged the lawyers to follow them to their own rival "black power" meeting in another room of the law school.

The white attorneys of the nation were paralyzed and speechless at this show of force by the black invaders, not realizing that the whole thing had been staged with the connivance of Dean Pollak.

For a few dramatic seconds it appeared that violence would erupt, but the attorneys showed the control which their training in civilization had given them, and the "take-over" by the black militants was from their point of view a complete revolutionary success. Considering the place and circumstances, it was probably the most startling and dramatic preview of revolution staged anywhere in America in this time of crisis.

The lawyers got a taste of what they are up against when their Jewish overlords let loose "black power" to complete the destruction of Christian civilization, which has already been so weakened by their takeover of TV, radio, the news media, and perhaps most brazenly of all, the entertainment world, where every precept of Christ and the Ten Commandments is flaunted and mocked day after day.

LIBERTY LOBBY PRESENTS . . .

YOUR INFLUENCE COUNTS – USE IT!

A citizen's guide to legislative action. To obtain the best results, we have to know how to go about it.
